LENDING DEPARTMENT CATALOGUE

OF THE

PUBLIC LIBRARY OF VICTORIA.

* "DELECTANT DOMI, NON IMPEDIUNT FORIS, * * * PEREGRINANTUR, RUSTICANTUR."
—CICERO, Orat. pro Archia Poet. vii. 16.

LENDING DEPARTMENT OF THE PUBLIC LIBRARY OF VICTORIA.

THE LENDING DEPARTMENT is conducted on a system different from that in common use elsewhere. No single volumes are lent out; thus the heavy charge of supplying numerous copies of the same work, the expense and trouble of daily issuing, receiving, checking, and collating the books, the onerous and invidious references as to the respectability of the borrowers, the requisitions and guarantees, the inconvenience arising from detention and loss of volumes, and consequent irksome necessity for enforcing fines and compensation are all avoided.

Books, in numbers varying from 100 to 200, or 300, are lent to Public Libraries, Mechanics' Institutes, or Athenaeums, for periods extending over three, four, or six months, with further extension of time if required, on the conditions given below.

They are well bound in green morocco leather without letter pieces. On the upper side is the full motto.* They are packed in cases of oak, bound with brass, lined with green baize; the shelves are of such depth that the books are not allowed to suffer from friction in travelling.

Each case contains about fifty volumes. The weight being on an average about 112 lbs., and having strong handles at the sides, the case is raised without difficulty by one man. It is closed with a sliding door, on the inside of which is a list of the books in the case, and a printed form of the conditions of the loan. Each case is covered with a waterproof tarpaulin, to protect it while on its journey. When placed back to back on a table, or one on the other, and the doors are removed, the cases serve as open bookcases, and there is consequently no necessity to remove the books to place them on other shelves.

The books thus lent are mostly duplicates of those in the General Library. They are selected with due reference to the ordinary collections generally found to exist in the Institutions to which these loans are made. When a series of lectures is about to be given at any Literary Institution in the interior of the country, one case or more containing works on the subject to be illustrated can be supplied by the Committee. Assistance is thus afforded to the lecturer and the members of his class or audience, who can pursue at their leisure the study of the works to which they have been referred by him.

Loans have been made to the institutions enumerated in the Appendix, and the committees of many others have expressed a strong anxiety to avail themselves of the privilege of borrowing. They have been deterred, however, by the expense and risk of carriage—especially in winter—to great distances into districts to which railways have not yet been extended.

Donations have been made also by the Trustees of Photographs produced at the Crown Lands Office by permission of the Minister. These, of large size—admirably well executed—are representations of Pictures in the Dresden Gallery in the National Gallery of this Institution, of Engravings by Albert Durer and other eminent Masters.

The area over which the system has been carried out as yet embraces a population of about 130,000, and it has afforded to persons who frequent the local institutions means of participating in the advantages offered by this branch of the Library.

Six thousand one hundred and ten volumes—6,110 volumes—were circulated in 1879, amongst the inhabitants of 25 towns, giving to each town the use of from 800 to 1,600 in the course of one year. The use of each individual volume has thus been multiplied five or six fold.

The plan is capable of still further expansion, at a cost trifling in comparison with the amount of benefit conferred on those resident in remote parts of the country.

It is calculated to increase the interest felt in the welfare of this institution, to improve the relations between it and those in the interior, and to lead, it is hoped, at no distant time, to the association with it of these bodies as colleges of adults affiliated to a voluntary university of adults. It furnishes, moreover, one of the most effectual modes of silencing the common objection as to the propensity to concentrate and centralise the enjoyments of intellectual culture in the Metropolis, at the expense of the Provinces.
